As Director of Project Development, Chris plays a vital role in expanding our reach in the rapidly growing Virginia markets. With a decade-long tenure in construction, Chris has been involved in multiple facets of the industry. His diverse background reflects a deep understanding of the construction process, project management, and business development.

A graduate of Virginia Military Institute (VMI) with a degree in biology, Chris transitioned seamlessly into the construction sector, showcasing his adaptability and commitment to his career. During college, he engaged in an impactful internship with a local civil construction company, spanning three years, where he served as a project management Intern. This experience sparked his passion for the construction industry and laid the foundation for his seven-year tenure with the company, including time in project management and a pivotal role in business development. Since joining Clancy & Theys, he has been essential to strengthening our existing relationships while forging new ones. His unwavering dedication and commitment to building relationships are unmistakable.

Throughout his career, Chris has actively participated in various industry associations, such as the Associated Builders and Contractors' Virginia Chapter (ABCVA), the Hampton Roads Association for Commercial Real Estate (HRACRE), the Greater Richmond Association for Commercial Real Estate (GRACRE), and the Hampton Roads Alliance, underscoring his commitment to professional development and community engagement.

Chris is known outside the office for his commitment to his family and the community. As an auxiliary member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW), he is dedicated to supporting and honoring veterans. In his spare time, Chris enjoys spending time with his wife, daughters, and nephew, coaching, and playing a round of golf.
